

Applied Philology (Russian as a Foreign Language)

"The program Philology, specialization "Applied Philology in English" is aimed at training highly qualified philologists-specialists in the field of English, Russian as a foreign, Italian languages, capable of carrying out professional pedagogical, scientific, analytical, organizational and translation activities in Russian, English, Italian. Within the framework of the program, the necessary competencies provided for by the state standard are formed. The graduate can successfully carry out communicative, pedagogical and research activities using the studied Russian and foreign languages.

In the modern world, in which the integration of cultures is the mainstream of politics in most countries, multilingualism is an integral part of a successful career."

In brief about the program

The learning is focused on a comprehensive, coordinated development of several languages (Russian as a foreign, English and Italian, there is also an opportunity to learn an additional foreign language as a part of additional educational programs). A unique characteristic of learning is the comparative aspect of the studying languages and cultures.

There are wide opportunities for the language practice with native speakers of the studied foreign languages at the Russian Language Institute and the opportunity to participate in scientific and sociocultural events and projects.

A large part of the learning is devoted to the study of linguoculturological and practical disciplines. One of the requirements of professionalism is knowledge of the laws of communication. On that basis mutual understanding between representatives of different linguistic and cultural communities can be achieved. Effective communication, the ability to find a common language and achieve professional goals are the important components of applied philology. Education in this profile is designed for those who want to find their place in a society built on effective management and innovative solutions.

The main educational program includes fundamental courses relating to the system and history of the studied languages and cultures, as well as practice-oriented author courses. These courses are aimed at the formation of specific skills necessary for the graduate's further professional activities.

Integrated studying of languages and philological disciplines allows to form the ability to speak and write fluently, competently, in accordance with regulatory requirements, in the languages studied; work with the text, know the laws of its construction and impact on the reader; to develop skills for creating independent texts.

Key disciplines

- Russian as a foreign language
- Methodology of teaching Russian as a foreign language
- Russian language in functional aspect
- History of Russian Culture
- Workshops on the culture of speech communication (English)
- Comparative Linguistics and Contrasting Linguistics
- History of Russian literature
- Russian literature in the context of world culture
- Innovative technologies for teaching Russian as a foreign language
- The conceptosphere of the Russian world